THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Olin Business School and Washington University Libraries partner with The Wall Street Journal

Olin Business School, Washington University Libraries and The Wall Street Journal have partnered to provide school-sponsored WSJ memberships to all students, faculty and staff at Washington University of St. Louis. Through the partnership, members have full digital access to The Wall Street Journal's trusted, factual news via WSJ.com and the app—including curated career content at students.wsj.com, and The Journal podcast.

In addition, members receive exclusive benefits with WSJ+, a complimentary benefits program that gives members access to virtual events and offers, such as invites to talks and a free e-book each month.

How to activate your complimentary Wall Street Journal membership:

Students, faculty and staff at Washington University of St. Louis can activate their complimentary memberships by visiting WSJ.com/WUSTL. Those who currently pay for an existing WSJ membership may call 1-800-JOURNAL and mention they are switching to their school-sponsored membership provided by Olin Business School and Washington University Libraries. Partial refunds will be dispersed.

Why The Wall Street Journal is right for Washington University of St. Louis students:

The Wall Street Journal offers students focused insight into career development, politics, college rankings, technology and much more. And with a dedicated Young Audiences team, WSJ is creating content for and by students, providing facts in these uncertain times.

About The Wall Street Journal

The Wall Street Journal is a global news organization that provides leading news, information, commentary and analysis. Published by Dow Jones, The Wall Street Journal engages readers across print, digital, mobile, social and video. Building on its heritage as the preeminent source of global business and financial news, the Journal includes coverage of U.S. & world news, politics, arts, culture, lifestyle, sports and health. It holds 38 Pulitzer Prizes for outstanding journalism.